Statement of [REDACTED]

b6
b7C

I am [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] also a reserve military officer and special agent with the Air Force Office of Special Investigations (AFOSI), having joined AFOSI in 2007 following [REDACTED]

I attended the Aspen Security Forum from [REDACTED] at the Aspen Institute in Aspen, Colorado. My civilian employer paid the attendance fee and expenses. On Friday, [REDACTED] Ms. Paula Broadwell was seated [REDACTED]

b6

[REDACTED] she was approached by [REDACTED] I recognized [REDACTED] as he was a panelist that day. At the time, I was hunched over my laptop and working on legal matters.

Upon being approached [REDACTED] Ms. Broadwell came to her feet and the two chatted briefly. I overheard [REDACTED] indicating to Ms. Broadwell that once "the Director was back from his trip" from overseas they would attempt to arrange a meeting with "the Director." It was clear from the reference that the "Director" referenced Director, CIA. I was somewhat surprised at the conversation, as I had not anticipated a biographer to also be involved in meetings involving a large government contractor. I was also somewhat surprised at the open reference to a senior official's foreign travel. However, since I did not know Ms. Broadwell [REDACTED] I also thought that the conversation could potentially have been related to personal or charitable items and that the travel reference could have been to a personal vacation. Ms. Broadwell agreed very much with [REDACTED] suggestion of a meeting and the brief conversation ended.

b6
b7C

At no time have I ever spoken or had any other form of contact with either Ms. Broadwell [REDACTED] [REDACTED] In hindsight, given recent circumstances, I felt the conversation was odd and have elected to unilaterally and voluntarily report it.

Date of entry 06/28/2013

On 05/29/2013, [redacted] was interviewed at the Davis-Monthan Air Force Base by SA [redacted]. After being advised of the identities of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, [redacted] provided the following:

b6
b7C

[redacted] was assigned to U.S. CENTRAL COMMAND (CENTCOM) before General DAVID PETRAEUS arrived. [redacted] was hired by [redacted]. [redacted] did not know PETRAEUS personally prior to his arrival at CENTCOM. [redacted] job was twofold: [redacted] was PETRAEUS's personal communicator, ensuring all of his communication devices were working properly, and [redacted] handled establishing forward communications. This team traveled to locations where PETRAEUS [redacted]. [redacted] traveled with PETRAEUS the majority of the time. [redacted] traveled with PETRAEUS when [redacted] needed a break. [redacted] did not travel to Afghanistan with the team. [redacted] also kept PETRAEUS's staff's communication systems running as well. PETRAEUS required almost 24 x 7 access to his systems. PETRAEUS and his team used big and little antennas and aircards. [redacted] team would get the internet established for PETRAEUS. The data is secured at the device level through encryption. For example, a laptop is connected to SECNET 54, a NSA crypto device, which then allows internet transport. [redacted]

b6
b7C
b7E

PETRAEUS's travel was split 50/50 between international and U.S. travel. While overseas, [redacted] traveled with PETRAEUS to countries in CENTCOM's AOR, including Central Asia, the Middle East, Iraq and Afghanistan, as well as Europe.

b6
b7C

[redacted] did not attend meetings PETRAEUS conducted. PETRAEUS did offer [redacted] the opportunity to attend these meetings as he said it would be good for [redacted] career.

[redacted] deployed with PETRAEUS to Afghanistan. PETRAEUS requested that [redacted] deploy with him. Most of the team working for PETRAEUS at CENTCOM went with him to Afghanistan.

When they arrived in Afghanistan, they found that a lot of communication equipment had been taken with General [redacted] team when they traveled to Washington, DC. Since [redacted] team did not return to theatre, the communication equipment did not either. [redacted] arrived in Afghanistan [redacted] before PETRAEUS and during this time found computers and printers for PETRAEUS and his staff.

b6
b7E

While at CENTCOM, PETRAEUS had a staff of approximately [redacted] people. When he traveled, usually [redacted] members of his staff traveled with him. In Afghanistan, his staff consisted of approximately [redacted] members. PETRAEUS's advance team went from [redacted] members at CENTCOM to [redacted] members in Afghanistan.

While at CENTCOM, PETRAEUS was able to be live on his systems in his car and airplane. At the time, even the Secretary of the Defense did not have this capability. When they arrived in Afghanistan, they found things were 20 years behind the times due to the equipment and territory issues they faced. [redacted] needed supplies and CENTCOM was able to get the supplies to them in theatre [redacted] team were then able to provide PETRAEUS with the same level of service he received at CENTCOM.

b7E

[redacted] monitored PETRAEUS's computers to ensure they were connected and the proper webpages and email were working. PETRAEUS had [redacted] computers, [redacted] In Afghanistan, PETRAEUS also had a [redacted] computer. PETRAEUS's computers were password protected and [redacted] does not remember if [redacted] signed a waiver to have permission to [redacted] PETRAEUS [redacted] Normally, a General's [redacted] [redacted] is not sure if [redacted] PETRAEUS's [redacted] [redacted] did not read PETRAEUS's emails, but did see items in his inbox from time to time.

b7E

While in Afghanistan, approximately [redacted] minutes prior to PETRAEUS waking, a member of his team would enter his room and conduct a communications check. This individual would ensure PETRAEUS's computers were up and running.

b6

PETRAEUS would have been required to take INFOSEC training. [redacted] did not observe PETRAEUS take this training, but believes he did in fact take the training. PETRAEUS was very aware of information security and made sure [redacted] asking for him.

[redacted] was classified NATO SECRET. PETRAEUS had a top secret computer in the Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility (SCIF), but mostly had his staff deal with [redacted] was PETRAEUS' [redacted] [redacted] office was not located in the SCIF. In Afghanistan, the SCIF was used for different purposes, and was not always at the TOP SECRET level. BROADWELL was in the SCIF, but [redacted] is not sure in what capacity. BROADWELL attended briefings just as other journalists did.

No one on [redacted] team ever came to [redacted] voicing concerns over items they were asked to provide to BROADWELL.

[redacted] does not know if BROADWELL was ever reported for OPSEC violations.

b6

[REDACTED] met BROADWELL at this event, he thought she was just another PETRAEUS groupie. PETRAEUS had already met BROADWELL before this event as she was well into her dissertation.

[REDACTED] next saw BROADWELL approximately [REDACTED] later at Fort Benning, possibly in [REDACTED] asked [REDACTED] what BROADWELL's deal was, and was told she was working on her dissertation about PETRAEUS. [REDACTED] does not know for sure when the dissertation turned into writing a book, but believes the turning point came when PETRAEUS took command in Afghanistan.

b6
b7C

BROADWELL came to UNITED STATES CENTRAL COMMAND (CENTCOM) to meet with PETRAEUS. [REDACTED] believes she came to CENTCOM after their trip to Fort Benning. BROADWELL interviewed PETRAEUS on this trip. [REDACTED] took BROADWELL around. [REDACTED] also took BROADWELL around when they were in Afghanistan. [REDACTED] is a Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy. By this time, BROADWELL knew a lot of people and was treated as a member of the media. While at CENTCOM, PETRAEUS conducted a lot of interviews on Saturdays. These interviews were with A-list members of the media.

b6

There was a big question as to whether BROADWELL was a member of the Army or a journalist, because technically she was both. BROADWELL was a reservist at West Point and held a security clearance.

BROADWELL was treated differently than other journalists by [REDACTED] and PETRAEUS. BROADWELL had access to people that other journalists would not have gotten. BROADWELL was also able to embed with units that would have been off limits to other journalists.

b6

There is a FAO in Afghanistan that handles media, including transporting journalists to different areas in the country. A Department of Defense directive allows journalists to fly on helicopters in country.

BROADWELL developed relationships with people in Afghanistan and developed plans for her trips to Afghanistan. [REDACTED] then had to make her schedule work. [REDACTED] told BROADWELL that she was [REDACTED] because it looked like she was getting preferential treatment.

b6

BROADWELL prided herself on being a female version of PETRAEUS. BROADWELL did not take no for an answer and would always push forward. BROADWELL tried to go around [REDACTED] by sending notes to PETRAEUS directly, advising him of her plans. When BROADWELL told [REDACTED] of her plans and he said no, she went back to PETRAEUS, who told [REDACTED] to make it happen.

When BROADWELL was in country, [REDACTED] worked [REDACTED] hours a day because she [REDACTED] BROADWELL in addition to the other aspects of her job. BROADWELL tried to observe interviews PETRAEUS conducted with other journalists. Since BROADWELL was writing PETRAEUS's biography, she said she needed access to these interviews.

b6
b7C

BROADWELL came to Afghanistan for trips lasting approximately [REDACTED] at a time. BROADWELL wanted to do the best she could and [REDACTED] was often the bump in the road for her. [REDACTED] was just trying to protect PETRAEUS.

b6

On the first trips BROADWELL made to Afghanistan, she spent a lot of time in the field. PETRAEUS and BROADWELL did not see each other most of the trip.

Towards the end, BROADWELL felt PETRAEUS was being obtuse to her because she believed PETRAEUS wanted to write his own book. If PETRAEUS gave her everything, it would be in her book, not his book. Therefore, BROADWELL felt she was only getting information that every other reporter was also getting. BROADWELL wanted more in-depth and candid thoughts from PETRAEUS to put in her book.

b6

PETRAEUS stayed on message when speaking with journalists. PETRAEUS had talking points for most topics he knew he would be questioned on.

BROADWELL's first trip to Afghanistan was on September 28, 2010. [REDACTED] believes she traveled as a journalist. Journalists were credentialed through the IJC Public Affairs Office (IJC PAO). The IJC PAO was located at the airport in Kabul. When BROADWELL landed in Kabul, she would have been picked up by a Public Affairs Officer and credentialed. [REDACTED] might have been listed as BROADWELL's sponsor.

b6

BROADWELL's publisher paid for her to travel to Afghanistan. A number of journalists who were writing books came to Afghanistan. Bloggers also traveled to Afghanistan.

PETRAEUS wanted journalists to attend the Morning Stand Up Brief (MSUB). The MSUBs were conducted at the Secret level, but to the lowest sense of the term. There was also an after meeting in which Secret information was discussed. Members of the media were not invited to the after meeting, including BROADWELL. Members of the media were required to sign non-disclosure forms. Approximately 30-40 journalists attended the MSUB during [REDACTED] time in Afghanistan. Handouts were not provided to attendee's of the MSUB. A summary of the MSUB was prepared, but [REDACTED] does not know where it was posted, or in what form it was produced. [redacted] never saw BROADWELL with minutes or slides of the MSUB.

b6
b7C

PETRAEUS had a very flat leadership style. Everyone had PETRAEUS's email and could go directly to him. PETRAEUS made everyone feel like they had a special relationship with him.

Members of the media were provided with unclassified slides. When PETRAEUS was interviewed, [redacted] prepared a preparation pack for PETRAEUS that included the journalists' biography, slides, talking points and the expected questions. If the interview was with a heavy hitting reporter, [redacted] prepared PETRAEUS one-on-one. All members of the media received the same unclassified slide packet.

b6

[redacted] described the environment of the Army as death by PowerPoint. In this regard, since BROADWELL spent a lot of time in the field, it is probable she received slides while there.

If [redacted] saw BROADWELL with classified documents, she would have told [redacted] BROADWELL never brought back anything from the field to ask about proper classification levels or if she could use it in her book. BROADWELL would not have shown [redacted] any classified information because she knew [redacted] would take it away from her. BROADWELL had a sense of entitlement.

b6
b7C

[redacted] was always with PETRAEUS when BROADWELL interviewed him. There were [redacted] occasions where PETRAEUS and BROADWELL had dinner together and [redacted] was not present. On these occasions, dinner was not behind closed doors as the door was open. [redacted] asked PETRAEUS if he wanted him to be there, and PETRAEUS usually did. On two occasions, PETRAEUS said no because they would just be eating. On another occasion, [redacted] were busy during a scheduled interview time, but PETRAEUS said it was fine they were not present. Towards the end of their time in Afghanistan, BROADWELL's time with PETRAEUS was random. BROADWELL also got time with PETRAEUS when they went running, but others got time with PETRAEUS in this same manner.

b6
b7C

Both BROADWELL and [redacted] recorded interviews between BROADWELL and PETRAEUS. PETRAEUS did not record the interviews as that was [redacted] job. Following the interviews, BROADWELL transcribed the recordings. [redacted] recorder was a backup in case BROADWELL's failed. [redacted] does not recall BROADWELL using [redacted] that looked like a pen. [redacted] remembers BROADWELL having a [redacted] to have her book reviewed by the Army.

BROADWELL respected both [REDACTED] and PETRAEUS and would not have done anything that would have taken her out of their good graces.

b6
b7C

It was not odd that BROADWELL traveled with PETRAEUS on his farewell tour back to the United States. Reporters traveled with the team in the past. Reporters offered to pay for their flights, but most times they did not pay. The purpose of the farewell tour was to thank countries for their support with the war efforts. They stopped in [REDACTED]. Each of these countries had a connection to the war and PETRAEUS provided them with an update.

b7E

[REDACTED] did not attend PETRAEUS's outbrief at the National Defense University (NDU). [REDACTED] stayed in Washington, DC for approximately [REDACTED] following their return from Afghanistan to wrap up some interviews. [REDACTED] went [REDACTED] and then returned to Washington, DC for work in [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] has been at his current job since [REDACTED].

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] has stayed in contact with both BROADWELL and PETRAEUS. [REDACTED] visited PETRAEUS at the Central Intelligence Agency and met with his Public Affairs Officer. [REDACTED] saw PETRAEUS at the COSMOS CLUB in March and they discussed PETRAEUS's re-emergence. PETRAEUS is paying a lot of money to reform his image.

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] was supposed to attend [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] has not had much contact with BROADWELL since news of the affair broke. BROADWELL wanted to know if [REDACTED] spoke to a reporter about her. BROADWELL did not make a lot of friends on the staff.

b6

[REDACTED] believes PETRAEUS and BROADWELL were thinking about working on another book together. Since PETRAEUS finally [REDACTED] [REDACTED] does not know what information PETRAEUS shared with BROADWELL. BROADWELL said PETRAEUS was opening up his attic, but [REDACTED] does not know what type of information PETRAEUS was providing. [REDACTED] believes this meant BROADWELL was going through PETRAEUS's books and notes throughout the years.

All of the information [REDACTED] had on PETRAEUS went to NDU. It is possible PETRAEUS's [REDACTED] contained classified materials.

On August 2, 2013, United States Army Major [redacted] date of birth [redacted] was interviewed at her residence located at [redacted] Alexandria, Virginia, by Special Agents [redacted] [redacted]. Witnessing the interview was United States Army Criminal Investigative Division Special Agent [redacted]. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, [redacted] provided the following information:

While stationed in Afghanistan [redacted] was assigned as [redacted] at the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) Headquarters. In this position, [redacted] handled a variety of [redacted] matters. [redacted]

PAULA BROADWELL may have visited Afghanistan for the first time in fall 2010. ISAF and United States Army Public Affairs Offices were asked to support both BROADWELL's travel in country and the research she was conducting. [redacted] was told BROADWELL was writing a book on General DAVID PETRAEUS, and [redacted] was asked by United States Army [redacted] Colonel [redacted] to assist BROADWELL.

When entering Afghanistan, media members are credentialed and supported by a media organization. On BROADWELL's initial visit, she did not have any support from a recognized media organization. Despite this, it was made known that BROADWELL was a military reserve officer and she should be given access beyond that of a normal journalist.

[redacted] questioned both Colonel [redacted] and [redacted] United States Navy Lieutenant Commander [redacted] regarding BROADWELL's status. It was cloudy as to whether BROADWELL was a journalist, a military officer, or both. BROADWELL did try to receive military reserve credit while in Afghanistan. [redacted] does not know if BROADWELL received this credit. In the beginning, BROADWELL was escorted around ISAF Headquarters. As she came back on additional trips, BROADWELL had unescorted access around the Headquarters.

On [redacted] trip to Afghanistan, she did have the backing of a media organization. Although BROADWELL never interviewed [redacted] Colonel [redacted] asked [redacted] to schedule some interviews for BROADWELL and get BROADWELL access to meetings such as Special Operations Forces (SOF) briefings. BROADWELL did attend some SOF briefings, which were classified as Top Secret/SCI, as well as COMISAF (ISAF Commander) daily updates.

b6
b7C

[redacted] took issue with BROADWELL's attendance at the SOF briefings. [redacted] recalled the presence of one other journalist, CNN reporter [redacted] at a SOF meeting. [redacted] believed BROADWELL did not have a need to know regarding SOF briefings. When [redacted] questioned BROADWELL's presence at SOF briefings with General PETRAEUS, she was told by Colonel [redacted] and Colonel [redacted] of PETRAEUS' Commander's Action Group (CAG), that BROADWELL was a military intelligence officer with a clearance and General PETRAEUS wanted BROADWELL in attendance. [redacted] never witnessed BROADWELL's attendance at a SOF meeting without General PETRAEUS. [redacted] does not recall BROADWELL using an audio recorder during the SOF briefings.

During the COMISAF daily updates, PowerPoint slides were displayed on a screen. Sometimes there were handouts distributed to attendees which were classified as Secret. As an attendee, BROADWELL would have received a handout copy. Each recipient was responsible for handling and destroying these handouts properly. At the conclusion of the update, these copies should have been placed in a burn bag upon exiting the room. [redacted] does not recall if BROADWELL ever left a COMISAF daily update with hardcopy documents, and [redacted] never witnessed BROADWELL mishandle classified documents. [redacted] does not recall BROADWELL using an audio recorder during COMISAF daily updates.

While in Afghanistan, BROADWELL blogged for the Foreign Policy Post. In one blog posting, BROADWELL included a slide/picture provided to her by Lieutenant Colonel [redacted]. [redacted] was not surprised to learn of the affair between BROADWELL and PETRAEUS. The affair could potentially have started in Afghanistan, but it would have been difficult given the constant presence of PETRAEUS' staff. While in Afghanistan, [redacted] witnessed an inappropriate relationship between BROADWELL and PETRAEUS, but not an affair. Date of entry 08/13/2013

On August 1, 2013, Retired United States Navy Lieutenant Commander [redacted] date of birth [redacted] social security number [redacted] was interviewed at his residence located at [redacted] Fairfax, Virginia, by Special Agents [redacted] [redacted]. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, [redacted] provided the following information:

b6
b7C

[redacted] first contact with PAULA BROADWELL occurred in approximately [redacted] while he was stationed at International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) Headquarters in Kabul, Afghanistan. [redacted] was interviewed twice by BROADWELL for her book, "All In: The Education of General David Petraeus." BROADWELL first contacted [redacted] via his AOL email account. [redacted] advised he may have copies of email correspondence with BROADWELL archived in his AOL account; however, he was unable to produce copies of these emails during the interview.

b6
b7C

[redacted] reported to Afghanistan to work under the command of United States Army General [redacted] who was ISAF Commander (COMISAF). Shortly after [redacted] arrival, [redacted]

b6

PETRAEUS' arrival in Afghanistan, [redacted] briefed PETRAEUS' Commander's Action Group (CAG). [redacted] believes someone from the CAG staff passed his name along to BROADWELL as someone she should interview for her book.

At ISAF Headquarters [redacted] was assigned to the [redacted] [redacted] and BROADWELL had their first personal meeting in [redacted] at a coffee shop located across the street from the main ISAF Headquarters building. This meeting lasted approximately 30 to 45 minutes. BROADWELL explained her purpose for being at ISAF Headquarters, her career history and experience, and why she wanted to talk to [redacted]. In return, [redacted] discussed his assignment at [redacted] which was to [redacted] commanders. To accomplish [redacted] developed a plan and wrote a paper along with his commanding officer, a Major General, for PETRAEUS' review and approval.

Following this initial exchange of information, BROADWELL wanted to meet [redacted] again. Between their two meetings, BROADWELL and [redacted] did exchange emails. Their second meeting occurred [redacted] weeks after the first at the same coffee shop. At this hour-long meeting, [redacted] provided BROADWELL hardcopies of some classified documents. BROADWELL claimed to be a military officer with a clearance. As BROADWELL had access to ISAF Headquarters [redacted] did not question BROADWELL came to [redacted] battlespace and walked the battlefield in [redacted] BROADWELL was not accompanied by PETRAEUS on these trips. During these visits, BROADWELL interviewed [redacted] and his staff of officers. BROADWELL had full access to [redacted] staff and [redacted] when she interviewed them, however [redacted] does not remember if BROADWELL recorded her interview with him. It was Colonel [redacted] who coordinated with [redacted] to allow BROADWELL to travel to [redacted] battlespace. [redacted] could have refused her travel, but he did not want to turn media members away that could tell the stories of his soldiers.

b7C

While in Afghanistan, BROADWELL attended briefings given by [redacted] which included instructions provided to all reporters working in [redacted] area of responsibility. It was unclear as to what BROADWELL's role was in Afghanistan. [redacted] understood BROADWELL to be writing a biography on General PETRAEUS showing how PETRAEUS' strategic guidance was implemented in the field. [redacted] treated her as an author and member of the media. BROADWELL said she had a security clearance. In working with BROADWELL, [redacted] intent was to tell his soldiers' stories as transparently as possible.

b6
b7C

[redacted] did not have a Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility (SCIF) in his battalion operations center, and [redacted] battalion had no access to Top Secret information. However, in the briefings BROADWELL attended which were provided by [redacted] she probably saw information classified as Secret. [redacted] does not remember BROADWELL walking away from these briefings with any classified documents. During his tour in Afghanistan, [redacted] had two journalists removed from the field for publishing classified information. [redacted] read BROADWELL's blogs which were posted on the internet while she was in Afghanistan, and [redacted] did not consider any of her postings to be classified. [redacted] reviewed one of BROADWELL's blogs before it was posted and made some comments and recommendations to BROADWELL on information that was not classified. [redacted] was not aware of any Operational Security (OpSec) violations committed by BROADWELL while she was in Afghanistan.

b6

[redacted] never sent BROADWELL anything via a Secret Internet Protocol Router (SIPR) account. [redacted] does not recall telling BROADWELL to get a [redacted] account. She would need such an account to receive classified information. Although [redacted] could not recall specifics, BROADWELL told him she could not use Secret or classified information in her book. She also said the book was to be vetted by ISAF and a friend of BROADWELL's [redacted] [redacted] does not know if BROADWELL's book was vetted.

[redacted] first worked for General DAVID PETRAEUS as a Battalion

PETRAEUS from July to September as part of the Multi-National Security

From July 2009 to July 2010 [redacted] was assigned to PETRAEUS' personal to Afghanistan several times, staying two to four weeks at a time. These visits began in the fall of 2010 and became more frequent in the spring of 2011. When asked in what capacity BROADWELL visited Afghanistan, [redacted] replied, "I hope as media. [redacted] is unsure who at International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) command made the determination that BROADWELL was media on her first visit to Afghanistan. [redacted] and PETRAEUS discussed BROADWELL's media status with Colonel [redacted] who was the ISAF Public Affairs Officer. BROADWELL could not have come into Afghanistan as a civilian (without media credentials), and she was not under Army Reserve orders to come into country. [redacted] would not allow BROADWELL to be in Afghanistan as a Military Intelligence Officer unless she received orders issued by her reserve command. BROADWELL did request to be embedded in a Special Operations Unit, but [redacted] denied this request.

b6
b7C

While BROADWELL was in Afghanistan, [redacted] saw her on 80% of the days she was stationed at ISAF Headquarters in Kabul. BROADWELL did go out with field units in Kandahar and Regional Command East. Neither [redacted] nor PETRAEUS accompanied BROADWELL on these trips. Media were permitted to ride on military helicopters on such trips. While in Afghanistan, [redacted] understood BROADWELL was collecting information for her book on PETRAEUS. The dissertation that BROADWELL had been writing morphed into a book on PETRAEUS during BROADWELL's trips to Afghanistan.

b6
b7C

While in Afghanistan, [redacted] PETRAEUS, and [redacted] had discussions of what the embedded media members would be exposed to for purposes of reporting. This included BROADWELL's exposure. BROADWELL did have access at ISAF headquarters, but her access was not "out-of-bounds".

b6
b7C

BROADWELL attended ISAF Commander (COMISAF) daily updates. Again, it was normal for media members to attend these daily updates. Each media member signed a non-disclosure statement to have access to the COMISAF updates. Fifty to sixty people attended the updates. Of the presentation slides which were displayed on the screen, hard copies were not handed out. These slides, along with COMISAF update notes, would be uploaded daily to the [redacted] Network and Afghan Mission (NATO) Network. BROADWELL did not have access to [redacted] [redacted] Network in the ISAF Operations Center, and thus would not have access to electronic copies of COMISAF updates or presentation slides.

b6
b7E

To attend the COMISAF updates, BROADWELL needed an escort from the ISAF Public Affairs Office. This would have included [redacted] and two officers working for him. One officer was from the Navy and came with the team from USCENTCOM.

BROADWELL had a trailer at ISAF headquarters which served as her sleeping quarters. She had unescorted access to all common areas around the base, and [redacted] never saw BROADWELL alone in any space which would require an escort. [redacted] never provided BROADWELL with classified information. However, after returning from Afghanistan [redacted] did give BROADWELL unclassified information regarding Counter-Insurgency (COIN) Operations in Mosul, Iraq for her dissertation. [redacted] does not recall receiving any email directing him to provide BROADWELL with classified information. He would be very surprised if such an email existed.

b7C

While working in Afghanistan [redacted] described PETRAEUS' security awareness as being good. [redacted] never received classified information from PETRAEUS on an unclassified network. [redacted] did not possess PETRAEUS' [redacted] never witnessed BROADWELL using any of PETRAEUS' computers. [redacted] is not aware of anyone providing BROADWELL documents following a meeting or briefing, such as the COMISAF daily update. [redacted] is not aware of any military officer being instructed to provide BROADWELL with copies of emails.

b6
b7E

When meeting with members of the media, PETRAEUS did not use an audio recorder. [redacted] would be present for PETRAEUS' interviews with the media and [redacted] BROADWELL used [redacted] when interviewing PETRAEUS. Upon the initial meeting between [redacted] and BROADWELL at Fort Benning in 2009, BROADWELL [redacted] minute interview with [redacted]

PETRAEUS and his staff departed Afghanistan in July 2011 and made multiple stops in Europe while en-route to the United States. BROADWELL was the only media member on this trip. It was not normal for her to be there, but [redacted] is unaware if her presence and transport via military aircraft violated policy. [redacted] believes [redacted] would know if this was a policy violation. BROADWELL had her own hotel rooms in Europe, and she should have paid for her own accommodations. She may not have had to pay for the flight.

b7C

Upon their return from Afghanistan in July 2011, [redacted] was unaware of the continuing relationship between PETRAEUS and BROADWELL. [redacted] saw the relationship between PETRAEUS and BROADWELL as professional and that of a mentor/mentee. The affair between PETRAEUS and BROADWELL did not take place in Afghanistan. [redacted] first became aware of the affair when PETRAEUS resigned from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). [redacted] was surprised PETRAEUS allowed the affair to happen. her trips to Afghanistan. [redacted] attempted to help get BROADWELL Army Reserve credit for her time in Afghanistan. [redacted] as BROADWELL's senior rater, advised [redacted] not to make any special accommodation for BROADWELL in this regard. [redacted] never saw BROADWELL in uniform while in Afghanistan. BROADWELL was there as a journalist.

b7C

While at ISAF Headquarters, [redacted] saw BROADWELL on multiple occasions attend the 7:30am morning briefings delivered to PETRAEUS. During these briefings, BROADWELL sat in chairs reserved for journalists. During the briefings, notes were taken of what PETRAEUS said or directed by the Tri-Services Joint Information Operations Center staff. The Tri-Services Joint Information Operations Center staff included cleared members of the Afghan and Pakistan militaries. Approximately 300 people would participate in the 7:30am briefings via Adobe Connect.

b6
b7C

The notes taken during the 7:30am briefings were posted on the [redacted] [redacted] as capable of handling up to ISAF Secret information. [redacted] provided hardcopies of some 7:30am briefings to BROADWELL. These hardcopies were first scrubbed by [redacted] for classified information so that only unmarked unclassified summaries were provided to BROADWELL. [redacted] provided approximately twenty days worth of briefings which consisted of about forty printed pages. [redacted] provided these briefings to BROADWELL with full knowledge and permission of PETRAEUS and [redacted] could identify the copies of briefings provided to BROADWELL if shown the copies. [redacted] did not provide BROADWELL any classified information. BROADWELL never asked [redacted] for classified information, only the unclassified hardcopies of the 7:30am briefings.

[redacted] reviewed BROADWELL's book, "All In: The Education of General David Petraeus." It was unclear whether BROADWELL, as a reservist, needed the Army to review the book prior to publication. As the publisher did not want PETRAEUS to preview the book, [redacted] agreed to review it and considered it the prudent thing to do to ensure the book did not include any classified information. During [redacted] review of the book, he suggested BROADWELL delete passages containing classified information about special operations forces. These passages may have been from Chapter 5 of the book. To [redacted] knowledge, BROADWELL took his suggestions and removed the sensitive information.

[redacted] does not recall receiving classified information, notes, or questions from BROADWELL via an unclassified email. After being advised of the identities of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, [redacted] provided the following:

[redacted] first worked under General DAVID PETRAEUS while serving in Afghanistan. [redacted] first met PETRAEUS at a pinning ceremony for a battle [redacted] and his men fought in Afghanistan. This battle was chronicled in PAULA BROADWELL's book, All In: The Education of General David Petraeus. At the pinning ceremony, PETRAEUS asked [redacted] to tell the story of the battle for the book. After the ceremony, while at [redacted] [redacted] received an email from PETRAEUS introducing [redacted] to BROADWELL. [redacted] provided a couple of pages of information about the battle and that was the last he heard until the book came out.

were granted at a later date. PETRAEUS awarded the [redacted] awards at the [redacted]

b6
b7C

[redacted] received an email from PETRAEUS following the ceremony. PETRAEUS had seen some write ups on the battle and had spoken to the Public Affairs Officer (PAO). PETRAEUS asked [redacted] if he could provide a write up on the battle.

[redacted] did not initially believe he provided storyboards to PETRAEUS related to this battle. If storyboards were provided, it would have been done over the [redacted]. The information provided might have been classified Afghan releasable. There were [redacted] which would possibly be classified SECRET-ISAF NATO. These were standard forms used to brief our partners.

b6
b7C

[redacted] does not remember what items BROADWELL specifically asked for. [redacted] does not remember BROADWELL asking for PETRAEUS to handle the transfer of material from [redacted] to herself. [redacted] does not have records of the emails between himself, PETRAEUS and BROADWELL.

b6

[redacted] believes these records are kept downrange and someone should have copies.

[redacted] knew BROADWELL was writing PETRAEUS's biography. [redacted] did not know BROADWELL was a military officer or that she possessed a security clearance. [redacted] does not recall BROADWELL asking for classified material. [redacted] does not remember feeling uncomfortable by any request.

b6
b7C

[redacted] does not remember providing [redacted]. These provided an overview of the [redacted]. [redacted] would have accompanied the overview which should have had a general summary in text format.

b6

[redacted] is not sure if there was a request to receive these items [redacted] could have been provided if BROADWELL requested. [redacted] was provided, [redacted] would have let the PAO ensure BROADWELL had the proper clearance.

b6
b7C

[redacted] would be surprised to know that pieces of classified [redacted] related to the battle appear in BROADWELL's book. That would not be good. [redacted] cannot say for sure that he sent the classified [redacted] but if they are in the book, he must have sent them.

directly, he would not have provided her with information because he did not know who she was.

[redacted] probably carbon copied BROADWELL and PETRAEUS when he sent the emails. The emails would have been sent on [redacted] but [redacted] believes they were sent via [redacted] because he did not have to change computers to send the emails. [redacted] believes BROADWELL was carbon copied on the emails, but he is unsure of her email address.

b6
b7C

PETRAEUS wanted to use this battle to tell the story that the fighting was still ongoing. PETRAEUS was probably briefed about the battle once the fighting started. Additionally, there was [redacted] at one point, so PETRAEUS would have been made aware of this. PETRAEUS was probably not moving the pieces during the battle, but was aware of the activity.

b6

Colonel [redacted] was [redacted] in Afghanistan. While in Afghanistan, [redacted] was a Captain. Since this time, [redacted] has been promoted to Major.

b6
b7C

If the information from the storyboards appears in the book, [redacted] sent the storyboards with the narrative. [redacted] would have expected that the storyboards would not have been used in the book. This is plagiarism with a punch in the face since it contained classified information.

b6
b7C

[redacted] has not read BROADWELL's book. [redacted] was shocked to hear of the affair between PETRAEUS and BROADWELL.

b6

Following the interview, [redacted] signed a Classified Information Non-Disclosure Statement (NDA). The NDA can be found in the corresponding 1A-envelope.

On December 3, 2014, [redacted] Combined Arms Center, United States Army [redacted] telephone number [redacted] was interviewed telephonically by Special Agents [redacted]. After being advised of the identities of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, [redacted] provided the following information:

b6
b7C

[redacted] never provided any Non-Disclosure Statement (NDS) or Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA) to DAVID PETRAEUS upon PETRAEUS' posting as Commanding General of Fort Leavenworth in 2005. United States Army Generals have Top Secret clearances. As an incoming General, [redacted] believes PETRAEUS arrived at Fort Leavenworth with a Top Secret clearance and would not have been required to execute any paperwork, to include an NDS or NDA, to maintain his clearance. As per Army procedure, the Officer's "Losing Unit" sends a "Transfer In Status" to the Officer's "Gaining Unit". This "Transfer In Status" provides an accounting of all clearances being transferred for the Officer.

b7C

[redacted] found no records of any NDS or NDA signed by PETRAEUS in Fort Leavenworth's security records.

b6
b7C

[redacted] advised no security-related documents, to include an NDS or NDA, are located in a locked safe used by PETRAEUS while he was Commanding General at Fort Leavenworth.

We've gotten the logistics worked out and are scheduled to fly out Sunday, 19 May. There will be three of us [REDACTED] We're planning to fly back in the morning on Friday, 24 May. We're staying at the Hampton Inn and Suites -- Arrowhead Road, which looks like it's just around the corner from your office.

Our security office should've passed our clearances to you this morning. Should we bring our [REDACTED] or CAC cards? Also, I was thinking it might be helpful to have some of our classification guides down there, so could I email those to [REDACTED] account? I was thinking that would be easier than hand carrying them.

We'll plan on getting there at 0800 on Monday, if that works for you. If anything else comes up, my cell phone number is [REDACTED]

Thank you and see you Monday.

That works fine for us. Please let me know when you nail it down. Some admin stuff which may help you:

1. Location: Our office is a stand-alone facility located at 7915 Microsoft Way, Charlotte NC 28273 (704)672-6100. We are about 10 minutes from the airport. When you arrive at the guard shack, pass through and make your way to the front doors and our office receptionist. You can ask to either page me on the intercom or call through the switchboard. We will take care of the admin stuff first, and there will be time for you to leave during the day for any breaks/lunch (no food on premise). We do have plenty of refrigerators/microwaves which you are welcome to use. Plenty of parking.

2. Lodging: There are some hotels right down the road from our office, but I'd recommend 3 areas of town for a longer stay. All of these areas put you within 15 minutes of the office. Check online for hotels in these areas;
 - a. SouthPark: There is the SouthPark Mall which has upscale shopping and dining;
 - b. Ballantyne: Plenty of food/shops and convenient to office
 - c. Downtown Charlotte: Tons of stuff to do downtown and easy ride to the office which is about 10 minutes south of the city.
3. Clearances: Each of you should have a TS/SCI and [redacted] clearance. If not, please get with your security rep and ensure you get the needed clearance prior to arriving;
4. Dress: Business casual. No jeans. The reviewing room temperature tends to fluctuate, but we keep it cool due to all of the computers;
5. Review: We have nearly [redacted] information which we have reviewed and [redacted] more ongoing. We are still acquiring evidence including [redacted]
[redacted] This information will be viewed using a dual-monitor to make it easier. All of the reviewers will sit in one room specifically designated for this investigation. Expect to do a significant amount [redacted] We will provide you everything you need for your review;
6. Classified: This investigation is managed [redacted] and is focused on the Mishandling of Classified Information. There is a Litigation Hold and Preservation Notice on all communications related to this case, so please be careful about what you say and email. As such, only those with a need to know should be briefed on the details.

I just left you a voicemail, but figured I would also drop you a line as I called your bb and assume you do not have access to it during the day.

As you are aware, we have been working [redacted] with a number of outside agencies. One of our partners, the US Army, recently requested a number of files for review to determine if [redacted] based on evidence discovered in the course of our investigation. As part of the Army's review, they sent a number of items for classification review. They recently contacted us and advised they believe some of the information they are reviewing is owned by the NSA and are requesting assistance from the NSA for classification review. We are hoping you could put us in contact with the right person to help with this review. [redacted] [redacted] and his team were in Charlotte in the past to review evidence, but I am not sure if he would be the one to provide the classification review. We would like to get someone from the NSA to travel to Charlotte to review the two pieces of evidence. We do not believe it would be more than a day trip for whoever is assigned this task. Any help you can provide would be greatly appreciated.

As part of the Army's review, they sent a number of items for classification review. They recently contacted us and advised they believe some of the information they are reviewing is owned by the NSA and are requesting assistance from the NSA for classification review. We are hoping you could put us in contact with the right person to help with this review. [REDACTED] [REDACTED] and his team were in Charlotte in the past to review evidence, but I am not sure if he would be the one to provide the classification review. We would like to get someone from the NSA to travel to Charlotte to review the two pieces of evidence. We do not believe it would be more than a day trip for whoever is assigned this task. Hi [REDACTED]

Happy New Year. We are nearing the finish line on our [REDACTED] (S) [REDACTED] in Charlotte. DOJ has asked that we knock out a couple more interviews in the next week. Specifically, AFOSI has identified a [REDACTED] who had some interaction with [REDACTED] while stationed in Iraq (circa 2003). We've asked OSI to set up the interview and would like to get this done Wednesday or Thursday (1/14 or 1/15) next week.

Could you please obtain SAC Concurrence for [REDACTED] and I to travel up for this interview? Please let me know if you need an EC from the file or have any questions.

PAULA BROADWELL, date of birth (DOB) [redacted] social security account number [redacted] cellular telephone number [redacted] was interviewed at the Marriott City Center, Charlotte, North Carolina. Broadwell was advised that several classified documents were found during a forensic review of her computers. During the interview, she was shown each document and asked to provide a statement as to how she obtained them. After being advised of the nature of the interview, BROADWELL provided the following information:

b6

Broadwell identified several of the documents shown to her as being from her time in Afghanistan, but was unable to provide specifics as to how she obtained them. Several of the documents related to briefings she attended. She was unable to identify most of the classified documents she was shown. Broadwell spent several months in Afghanistan researching her book on David Petraeus. During her time there, she was given access to several briefings at the "Secret" classification level and below. Reporters were often given such access in order to provide them with situational awareness of the war. In order to receive the briefings she signed an "off the record" agreement which meant she could not write about classified information she observed. She would sometimes obtain a paper copy of briefings she attended in order to preserve as research for her book.

Broadwell is unaware of the full contents of the documents she maintains on her computer. She received CD's full of documents relating to time periods of David Petraeus' life for research purposes related to her book. She does not believe that all of the documents are still classified, only that they bear the classification markings. Some of the documents shown to her contained hand-written notes and markings, which she confirmed as her own.

Broadwell had boxes full of documents related to Petraeus' various

While in Afghanistan, Broadwell received two CD's from U.S. Army Colonel [REDACTED] which contained several power point presentations, some of which were classified as "Secret." The presentations covered events pertaining to the war in Iraq. She did not realize there were classified documents on the CD until after she returned to Charlotte. She believed the documents were no longer sensitive because they pertained to historical events. Broadwell currently has possession of the CD provided to her by [REDACTED]

b6

Broadwell did not use any classified information in writing her book. The book was reviewed by a military public affairs office and approved for release before it was published.

Broadwell interacted with various uniformed military members while researching her book. Some of her military acquaintances provided her with large volumes of printed and digital information, which she saved for later review. "Secret" documents were sometimes included in the documents she was provided. Broadwell also received large quantities of documents from military archive units in order to use for her book research.

Broadwell believed that much of the classified information located on her computer was no longer classified, as the classified information on those documents were events that had already occurred. Additionally, she advised that several documents in her possession were "over classified" as part of operational security for military actions in Afghanistan.

Broadwell has never received classified information from Petraeus. She characterized Petraeus as very procedure oriented and security conscious. She further stated that he allowed her to see unclassified documents, such as his daily brief, but would not let her have copies of them. Further, Petraeus is unaware of what documents she received or maintained copies of and stated that he would be "very upset" with her for keeping classified documents on her personal computer.

Broadwell did not have specific arrangements with any military personnel to provide her with classified information. She did not access any classified military computers, nor did she print any classified information from any classified systems. She did not use any other persons computer accesses to obtain classified information.

Broadwell characterized her time in Afghanistan as "fast paced" and stated that she never intended to improperly receive or store classified information. Rather, she received a large volume of documents and intended to review them upon her return to the U.S.. She characterized her having classified documents on her computer as "a huge mistake for anyone to make, especially a former intel officer."

As of the time of the interview, Broadwell had not deleted any of the classified information from her laptop. She was advised not to delete any data from her computer by interviewing agents.

Broadwell saw Petraeus in Washington D.C. sometime during the week of October 22, 2012. They were both attending a gala. She saw him only briefly and did not have the opportunity to speak with him, other than to exchange a greeting.

Broadwell and Petraeus have talked candidly since each of their interviews with the FBI. They confirmed their FBI interviews to each other. Petraeus told her he "was not diluting himself anymore that everything was going to turn out ok." [REDACTED]

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] She believes that if Petraeus "doesn't work for the greater good of the country, he'll die." She clarified that she did not think he would commit suicide. Petraeus did not disclose to her any details of his FBI interview.

Broadwell and Petraeus currently have limited communication and she is unsure of where their professional relationship currently stands.
